BRITISH CABINET CRISIS.

Referring to an item in the foreign news to-day foreshadowing an impending crisis in the British Government the following editorial from the San Francisco Chronicle of June 26th will be read with interest:

"It is evident that a British Cabinet crisis is not very far off. The Ministry has committed so many blunders lately that they cannot hope to keep the Conservatives with them much longer. Inside the Cabinet there are rivalries and strife. The leaders are all at loggerheads, each striving for his own aggrandisement. To-morrow there will be a meeting of the Cabinet to consider the situation. Before the close of the week Great Britain may be without a Ministry or a Parliament.

"It is wonderful that the Salisbury Ministry has remained in power so long. The real leaders, the great men of England, are not in it, and in fact there is no man of much ability or note in the Cabinet. Salisbury is a commonplace statesman, while Balfour, Goschen, Smith, Ritchie and Matthews were known to fame until called to the Salisbury Ministry. Sir Randolph Churchill is against the administration, so are Gladstone and Parnell. Dilke is in retirement. The Conservatives have hung on to office in the face of repeated defeats in the hope that Gladstone would die, but Gladstone shows no signs of dying. So the Salisbury Ministry must go to the wall and consent to re-submit the political issues of the time to the country."

ABOUT INCONSISTENCY.

The Bulletin attempts in a late issue to convict the ADVERTISER of inconsistency in its attitude toward the National Party. It seems that we held that party a few days since for "a rabble which intended to smash up everything and ruin everybody," and that we admit that many of its elected members are "honest and patriotic."

The inconsistency exists only in the imagination of the Bulletin and very likely of many who read but do not reflect. We have always admitted that many members of the National Party were personally both honest and patriotic, though we have believed and still believe its alliance with the Bush-Wilcox faction was politically immoral and disgraceful. It is easy to find precisely similar situations elsewhere. President Harrison, for instance, may be a perfectly honest man. But his alliance with "Matt" Quay and his failure to disavow and denounce him, is politically immoral and disgraceful. It would be easy to multiply parallels.

As to our belief that the National Party was a rabble intending to smash up everything, it may be said that we do not remember ever characterizing the party in that way. There was and is an element in the party plainly wearing that character. There is a "boodle" element. There is a very strong reactionary element. There is a progressive and reliable element. We did not pretend to know which of these elements would prevail. The reactionaries were not merely numerically by far the strongest but the noisiest and the most self-asserting of their party. They made themselves heard in the press and on the stump, while the progressive wing was suspiciously silent. It would have been no wonder if we had, under these circumstances, ascribed too much importance to the reactionary orators and writers who made the welkin ring with their cries. We were not in the confidence of the leaders of the party and could not know how far they intended to give the cold shoulder to the allies who had helped them to their seats.

We are happy to note that our worst fears have not been realized, and that the National party, while making and likely further to make, dangerous concessions to the reactionary elements with which it is so extensively permeated, yet does not seem at present to be dominated by those elements. The ratios of importance seem to be inversely as they were, prior to and during the election. The respectable element, happily for the country, has come somewhat more to the front. Mr. Bush doubtless feels himself betrayed, and none can blame him. But with the very doubtful morality of his party's treatment of him and his following we have nothing to do. We are very glad to see his discomfiture and are very willing to leave the means to the tough political consciences of the National party.

That there has been this virtual shifting of the center of gravity in the party since the election, seems almost too clear for discussion. The formation of the present Ministry is a palpable demonstration of it. The composition of the Ministry is an obvious concession to the Reform party. It does not command the approval of the whole National party, and could not exist without the support of Reform votes, votes which we believe will be freely given, if, as we hope and expect, the Ministry make a good record.

An Interesting Book on Athletic Sports.

"Athletic Sports in America, England and Australia" is the title of a new book recently issued. It comprises the history, characteristics, sketches of famous leaders, organization and great contests of baseball, cricket, football, la crosse, tennis, rowing and cycling. It also includes a very descriptive account of the famous tour around the world of the American ball teams. The book is most elegantly illustrated. The visit of the teams to Honolulu is graphically described, and there are illustrations of the Alameda docking, the Hawaiian Band, the Palace, natives eating poi, the pali, throne room, Kamehameha statue, Hawaiian lady in riding costume and a picture of Capt. Morse. But the finest picture in the book is the grand luau given at Honoukahu to the teams by the King. This is colored in the highest style of art, and is really a faithful and very creditable production.

A more interesting book on sports has seldom been issued from the press, and it is replete with the most entertaining reading matter. Pictures of various baseball teams are given. It is the work of Harry Palmer, J. A. Fynes, Frank Richter, W. L. Harris, Henry Chadwick and others, all well-known as able writers. Two copies have been sent to Honolulu by Mr. A. G. Spalding, the great baseball magnate, one for His Majesty, the other for Mr. Geo. W. Smith of Benson, Smith & Co. The copy for the King was presented to him in audience by Mr. Smith, and His Majesty expressed great pleasure in receiving it, and has forwarded an autograph letter of thanks to Mr. Spalding. The book is published by Hubbard Brothers, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and St. Louis.

LEATHER-HUNTING STARS.

The Kamehamehas Win Another Game from Last Year's Champions—Good Batting and Base Running.

The game of baseball on Saturday at Makiki was between the Kamehamehas and Stars and was won by the former by a score of 17 to 9. There was a large attendance of spectators. It was a game characterized by good batting, fielding and base running on the part of the Kamehamehas. They excel in the latter. Lawelawe especially distinguished himself by making a home run, a three and a two base hit. The home run hit was a splendid one, the ball going to the right field fence before dropping. He was loudly applauded and it was some time before the game could proceed owing to the enthusiasm of the audience. Mahuka again played a fine game at first and also batted well. Davis pitched in good form, striking out five Stars, Pahan giving him excellent support behind the bat. Warner who played in place of Crowell in right field did well. The Kamehamehas deserved their victory.

There was some change in the personnel of the Stars. E. Baldwin played at second in place of Carter who it was reported was sick at home with the "sunks." Baldwin guarded the second with his accustomed skill. Bruner played in center field, but did not have much to do. Chandler was batted all over the field. In the ninth innings Baldwin was put in the box, Chandler going to second. Chan. Wilder's throwing to second was quite a feature of the game. Wodehouse cannot get through a game now without making costly errors. His throwing to first was wretched. A. Perry played well at first, and Winter gathered in two flies in left field. In the eighth innings the Stars had a regular leather-hunting experience, for the Kamehamehas got in four singles and two two-baggers, scoring six times.

There were no passed balls or wild pitches during the game. W. A. Wall umpired with satisfaction behind the bat. Grupp of the Nipsies was the field umpire, but some of his decisions were very rank. Following is the official score:

ROYAL SCHOOL.

Annual Examinations and Closing Exercises.

This excellent institution for the education of Hawaiian youth, closed another year's work on Friday. Examinations were held in all the rooms, eleven in number, and showed that excellent work has been done during the year by the Principal, Rev. Alex. Mackintosh, and his efficient corps of assistants. About three hundred and eighty boys attend this school. The Board of Education report states that this school is beginning to change somewhat in character. For years the pupils have been entirely Hawaiians or half caste. There are now fifty-three Portuguese on the rolls, with a slight sprinkling of other nationalities. With a more exact system of grading, this will be one of the most successful schools in the Kingdom.

Shortly after 11 o'clock on Friday the closing exercises were held, and consisted of choruses, recitations and dialogues, all of which were well rendered, and pleased the large audience in attendance, very much indeed. The prizes were distributed at the close of the programme. They were presented to the successful pupils by the Hon. C
